

Intervision weekends YEP

What is an intervision weekend?

Intervision is a way of learning, in which colleagues learn from each other by getting together and discussing questions, ideas or challenges that they face during their work. YEP stimulates shared learning between Young Experts, and, therefore, encourages the organisation of 'intervision weekends' in the countries Young Experts are working and living. Shared learning is the crucial focus point of the intervision weekends. Additionally, actual and alumni Young Experts from various batches and backgrounds getting together for a weekend, strengthens the YEP network.

What does an intervision weekend look like?

There is no standard programme for the intervision weekends, as it fully depends on the local situation. As mentioned before, shared learning is on top of the agenda. Besides that, there is room to organise a field trip or other form of excursion that should be related to YEP organisations or projects.

Suggestions/recommendations for composing an intervision programme:

- Invite the Dutch embassy for a part of the programme: great for networking, and the embassies are usually keen to stay in touch with the Young Experts;
- Invite a member of (one of) your organisations to share their experiences or help with the development of your YEP ideas.

How can you organise an intervision weekend?

To organise an intervision weekend, you should hand in a proposed programme and budget to the YEP training coordinator. He/she will then give remarks and decides, based on the programme and earlier weekends that have been organised, whether the proposed weekend can take place. As a (alumnus/alumna) Young Expert, you are encouraged to join any intervision weekend that is organised in your vicinity.

What is the maximum budget and what costs are covered?

The maximum amount you can apply for is 2000 euros for the weekend. However, due to budget constraints, it is greatly stimulated to budget less than the maximum amount. Travel expenses to and from the weekends should be covered by yourselves or your organisations, any costs related to the accommodation, food, and field trips can be covered by YEP.
